

Credential Assessments

Credential Assessment Services help assessing and evaluating international credentials of those migrating to Canada. The Reports provided by these services help employers, educational institutions, community agencies and immigration authorities to understand the credentials of Internationally Trained Individuals.

The Following organizations help assess and evaluate international credentials to further the career goals of Immigrants in Canada:

- World Education Services (WES)
- International Credential Assessment Services (ICAS)
- The Comparative Education Service of the University of Toronto

World Education Services (WES) is the leading source of international education intelligence. WES is a not-for-profit organization with over thirty years' experience evaluating international credentials. WES provides more than 50,000 evaluations each year that are accepted by thousands of academic institutions, employers, licensing and certification boards and government agencies in Canada.

www.wes.org/ca

International Credential Assessment Service (ICAS) is a Canadian company committed to helping individuals achieve their personal and career goals by providing assessments of education completed outside Canada. ICAS Assessment Reports and related services also help employers, immigration authorities, educational institutions and community agencies to understand international education.

www.icascanada.ca

The Comparative Education Service of the University of Toronto is a credential evaluation service. It is recognized by the Canadian Information Centre for International Credentials (CICIC) as abiding by the General Guiding Principles for Good Practice. Non-Canadian academic qualifications are evaluated and equated to Canadian qualifications. These evaluations may be used for employment and immigration purposes but are not necessary if you plan to study at the University of Toronto.

<https://learn.utoronto.ca/international-professionals/comparative-education-service-ces>